

"Naming the Jew" is the Marker of True Quality in Right-Wing Media, by Andrew Anglin - The Unz Review

There is a dividing line between all political persons on this earth, and that is very simple: do they talk about Jews as the underlying, dominant elite force in the United States?

The term that has been used is "name the Jew." Thus: "I'm not sure I trust him, he seems good on the issues, but he doesn't name the Jew."

Personally, I have always found the term "name the Jew" to be crude and vulgar-sounding. I prefer "blame the Jews." However, the issue is the issue: political commentators who do not talk about the Jewish stranglehold on Western civilization are of the most mild use, at best.

In recent years, a lot of my talking points from when I started this website more than a decade ago are part of the mainstream conservative narrative. This includes some hardcore issues about the ongoing attempt to destroy white people, and perhaps more importantly even, it includes talk of a global elite that controls the Western political system and does not have its best interests in mind.

Basically, every major right-wing outlet now talks about "the elite" as a hostile entity. They include in this both government and private actors, and they state that these forces are working towards an agenda loosely identified as "globalism." Often, they actually describe the goals of this elite in terms that I sometimes find puerile or mundane, and yet I agree with the general thrust of the sentiment.

Whether you are on Fox News, Breitbart, or watching the main sponsored shows on Rumble, you find repeated: "the global elite at the World Economic Forum want us to live in pods and own nothing while we eat bugs and are sterilized and crippled by forced genetic vaccines." I don't take issue with that, and I think it is basically true, despite being a heavily simplified version of the actual agenda.

The problem is that none of these people can explain why these unspecific and apparently racially diverse elites want to do this. It doesn't make immediate, obvious sense why a group of powerful people would be obsessed with driving the masses into poverty, humiliating them, and crippling them with vaccines.

This is a big problem, because immediately upon hearing that not only are powerful people doing this, but that seemingly all people with power, with a few notable exceptions, are on board with this, the very first thing people want to know is "why?" Because, frankly, it is not intuitive, in that no normal person is able to imagine doing this themselves.

A normal man imagines getting rich. All men have imagined being rich. Typically, when a man pictures being rich, it is similar to the daydreams of Homer Simpson.

A normal (right-wing, white) man, when fantasizing about being rich, thinks about simple, selfish things:

- Sex
- Fun stuff (fast cars, boats, and other motor vehicles, world travel, luxury items)
- Status symbols (expensive clothes, big house with exquisite lawns; women and fun vehicles also fit into this category)

After that point, the normal man stops being able to list things he would do with money. And of course, the people at Davos already have all of these things.

Further: when asked about what he would do with political power, a normal man is typically altruistic:

- Make the economy more fair
- Ensure that everyone has a good job
- Clean up the streets, ensure safety for the people, make society comfortable and nice
- Have a strong country, but be peaceful with other countries
- Normalize social norms (normal men are opposed to most weird things)

Of course, normal men recognize that the WEF elites are “leftist,” in whatever sense.

Leftist (white) men, who I would not classify as normal (most leftists are women, sexual deviants, or ethnic minorities), have more or less the same types of drives. They probably would not admit to wanting sex, even though they would take advantage of it if they had access. Maybe they would have other selfish ambitions, such as wanting to be recognized for their creative genius or some such (most white leftist males believe they are creative geniuses). The leftist list of things they would do with political power would also be altruistic, just stupider: instead of fairness, they would say “equality,” and instead of good jobs they would say “free healthcare and good social benefits.” But they would say things they think are good for society, and I think that conservatives recognize that the standard leftist white men are pushing for political actions they think are good. (Leftists, conversely, tend to think of right-wingers as consciously, purposefully evil, which is rather bizarre, but is beyond our scope here today.)

Thus: when a normal man thinks of what he would do with elite power, he comes up with no explanation for the WEF actions. And then, when he thinks of what a normal Democrat voter would do, he also comes up empty-handed.

What we are talking about with the “elite agenda” of the WEF and the “globalists” is sadism. That is what defines this agenda. The people running things in the West have a desire to hurt people on purpose.

None of the explanations for this make very much sense. We hear that the elite have “the woke mind virus,” and actually believe in global warming and feminism and whatever else. It’s clear that some of the speakers at a WEF event, or some other globalist body do have genuine beliefs in these ideas, but it seems unlikely that the true elites themselves do. After all, as the conservative media will constantly inform you, they all fly to these events on private jets, and they all eat fine steak, while claiming that the peasants shouldn’t be allowed to fly commercial or eat low grade ground beef from industrially raised cattle.

Further, the conservative media, which does not “name the Jew,” will often go into the fact that global warming is a hoax, and that these people don’t actually believe in these things, and they only promote them for the sake of control (it’s very obvious that this is true). And again, they want to use that control for sadistic purposes: to degrade, dispossess, humiliate, and ultimately even kill normal people.

There is only one context in which this makes sense, and that is the Jewish context. When you look at the Jews, you find a group of people who are fundamentally sadistic, and have been for a very long time. Ultimately, you go back to the both historically real and meaningfully symbolic defining event of Jewish history, which is the murder of Jesus Christ. This was a sadistic act of evil, and it is only logical that the same people who would kill God would also be going around doing nasty things from that point onward. After all, these people define their identity by that most despicable of all murders.

You can go through the history of the Jews, and find them doing all sorts of nasty things, from starting and manipulating wars, to running various slavery operations, to running drug rings, to pushing disgusting and dehumanizing social norms, to poisoning wells, to kidnapping children for human sacrifice, to inventing and running the modern usury-based banking system, to pushing feminism and homosexuality and eventually trannies. There is no dirty deed these fiends have not been involved in.

Of course, what people will say is: “yes, but not all of the elites are Jewish.” This is true, but the underlying agenda is entirely Jewish. All of the heads of the agenda are Jewish. If we go back to the origin story of modern rabbinical Judaism, which is the murder of Jesus, we find that they didn’t do it themselves, but manipulated the Romans into carrying out the deed itself. (This was done through what we would call “political lobbying,” by the way. It’s very similar to the way the Jews now ensure funds for their wars in the Ukraine and Israel.)

Just so, the non-Jews involved in the “elite agenda” are all working for the Jews. Something like 40% of the WEF members and speakers are Jewish, even whilst Jews make up only 0.02% of the global population. That is an astonishing overrepresentation.

Earlier this month at the 2024 Davos event, the forum focused on Jewish issues explicitly, talking about global strategies to silence critics of Jews.

Q&A

At Davos, conversations about antisemitism take center stage

A panel at the World Economic Forum on Thursday will focus on the rise in global antisemitism

When you include the Jewish issue, the sadism of the global elite makes perfect sense: Jews have always hated Western civilization. They hate Christians, they hate freedom, they seek to undermine the values of European peoples and to replace them with their own value system that centers around homosexuality, war, death, and dehumanization. They are anti-Christ, and therefore in their very identity, they oppose everything that is good.

The other argument we hear from conservatives is that “not all Jews are like that.” Although I would argue that all Jews who do not repent of the murder of Christ are by definition poisonous and corrosive persons, obviously not every single Jew is a member of a global elite conspiracy. However, not every Italian is a member of the mafia, and not every black person is a criminal, and yet we still talk about “the Italian mafia” and “black crime,” because Italianness and blackness are fundamental to these things, even though not every individual member of the group is involved, and even while there may be non-Italians working in the mafia and non-black violent criminals.

It is only with the Jews that you are not allowed to say that a think is definitively Jewish. According to the media, which is run primarily (almost entirely) by Jews, we are not allowed to talk about a “Jewish media.” We are also not allowed to talk about a “Jewish banking system” or “Jewish Hollywood entertainment.” Just so, we are not allowed to talk about a “Jewish elite.”

It goes to follow logically: if the Jews are the ruling elite, and they are also hostile to those they rule over, why would they allow you to talk about that? Instead, they would use their elite power to silence you.

Unfortunately, many people in the conservative media apparatus who talk about the WEF and globalism know that these things are really and truly Jewish in character, and yet they don’t talk about it because they know that if you do talk about it, the Jews will use that elite power to come down on you, to take all your money, to ban you from everything, maybe even to frame you for crimes. They will ruin your life.

Of course, they don’t really mind if you just talk about a vague “globalist elite.” People who talk about that get some pushback (and even get accused of antisemitism when they’re not even talking about Jews), but they do not get completely destroyed.

Here’s the question: is it possible to fight a global elite that you can’t even identify, let alone define?

The answer is clearly “no.” And therein lies the problem with the overwhelming majority of “conservative” media: they are simply treading water, going nowhere, because they refuse to “name the Jew.”

It certainly does not help that the “conservative media” is itself infested with Jews, who take these positions for the explicit purpose of manipulating Christians into supporting their various agendas.

King of Conservative media, Jew Ben Shapiro (center), recently took Twitter owner Elon Musk (left) to Auschwitz for a humiliation ritual in which Musk was informed of why it is so important to censor the internet.
